It was instituted it seems, at the auspicious time, when a spirit of enter prise and public improvement was just ready for the impetus. The stock law was in force and unsightly fences were being torn away; paving and sidewalks were contemplated for many unimproved streets, and parks for the first time became a certainty of the immediate future. County and city authorities arose to the occasion and set an example to house-holders; and had the county been a contestant, the court-house yard would have run a close race for the capital M. L. ### FOR CITY BEAUTIFUL

house yard, however, is the prettiest

tion for that fact. "The Illinois Central hospital yard is also deserving of mention as a very pretty yard, as are the custom house yard and Carnegie library and we found a little vard adjoining the Tenth and Clay street fire station, belonging to that station, and kept up by the fire boys, which was one of the prettiest we saw in our trips around the city. "The yard at the Union Station is also worthy of especial notice and deserving of all the compliments it

"One thing worthy of notice was the large number of small yards which were in very pretty condition; with good stands of grass and tasteful selections of flowers, and showing evidence of much attention. In neighborhoods where we would find one of these, we would always find three or four more, which verifies the oft-quoted fact that if one man in a neighborhood keeps a pretty yard it stimulates his neighbor to do the same.

"Another thing shown by the trips the committee took around the city was that the localities where the fences have been taken down, as a whole presented the most pleasing appearance which prompts the hope that by next summer every one will recognize this fact, and show their appreciation of it by taking down the fences everywhere."

The Sun is well pleased with the results of the contests, and believes they have done a good deal toward stimulating an appreciation of and a pride in pretty yards. From the expression that have come from many sources there is no doubt of the good that has been done, and that next year the contests will create still greater interest.

Bradstreet's Report. New York, Aug. 4.-Bradstreet's weekly report follows: The sentiment in general seems to have become deidedly more optimistic, the practical assurances of heavy crop yield, the growing buoyancy of iron and steel industry and the relatively heavy volame of orders booked in general lines or fall and winter requirements being he princopal stimula. Iron and steel plants not actually engaged in making repairs, are being worked to their utnost capacity and the action of the principal products in resuming dividends on its common stock exerted a salutary effect on the sentiment. Some steel mills have booked the entire capacity for many months ahead, and if the usual fall business has not been discounted by midsummer bookings the question of deliveries will become a pressing one see, Griff," the doctor said, "that you are going to support Kenyon. I declare it shakes my confidence in you," and be drew forward his chair. Like most Americans, the physician something of a politician, and, as is also true of most Americans not professionally concerned in the hunt for office, this interest fluctuated between the two extremes of party enthusiasm before and nonpartisan disgust after elections.

Ryder smiled faintly. "Yes, we know just how much of a rascal Kenyon is, and we know nothing at all about the other fellow except that he wants the nomination, which is a bad sign. Suppose he should turn out a greater scamp! Really it's too much of a risk," he drawled, with an affectatien of contempt.

"Your politics always were a shock to your friends, but this serves to explain them," remarked the doctor, with latent combativeness. But Ryder was not to be beguiled into argument. He turned again to Miss Emory.

"Your father is not a practical politician or he would realize that it is only common thrift to send Kenyon country not without profit to himself. Resides, he is clamorous and persistent, and there seems no other way to dispose of him. It's either that or the

"That is my theory. Anyhow I don't see why your father should wish me to forego the mild excitement of assisting to re-elect my more or less disreputable friend. His original idea had been that the management of a country weekly would afford him opportunity for th serious work which he believed he could do, but he had not done this serious work and was not likely to do it. He felt more and more lonely and aloof as the evening wore on, and it was a relief when the doctor took him into the library to examine speciof Antioch, where there were undeveloped mineral lands for which he was trying to secure capital. This was a matter Oakley was interested in, since it might mean business for the road. He promptly forgot about Miss Emory and the objectionable Ryder and in ten minutes gave the doctor a better comprehension of the mode of procedure necessary to success than that gentleman had been able to learn in ten years of unfruitful attempting. He also supplied him with a few definite facts and figures in lieu of the multitude of glittering generalities on which he had been pinning his faith as a means of getting money into the

When at last they returned to the parlor they found another caller had arrived during their absence, a small, shabbily dressed man, with a high, bald head and weak, nearsighted eyes. It was Turner Joyce. Oakley knew him just as he was beginning to know; every other man, woman and child in

Joyce rose hastily, or, rather, stumbled to his feet as the doctor and Oakby entered the room:

Mr. Joyce continued to blink doubtfully at Ryder. He scarcely knew how to take the allusion to the frames. It was a sore point with him.
